Rainy season in the camp

Always think of bad weather when making camp preparations!

Help, rain, rain, rain

In every camp it is bound to rain, possibly for a few days in a row. Still, you often think only of the sunny days and prepare everything for them. A thunderstorm is only a temporary experience: it flashes and thunders, you run around in swimming trunks in the pouring rain and pull tent trenches you never thought necessary before. An hour later, the sun shines again, and it's all over.

But prolonged overland rain is something else: the air gets chillier, the rain paralyses initiative, everything feels damp, you can't summon yourself to do anything ...

In order not to be too surprised by a prolonged rainy season, you should already pay attention to some precautions when preparing.

- Choosing a campsite
- Camp sites by the creek
- Emergency shelter for tent camps
- Fall camp
- Dry clothes, rain gear
- Hold out daily routine
- Rain program
- Rain weather - adversity or experience
- Program options
  - outside the camp/home
  - inside the camp/home
- Camp cancellation in case of rain
