Am I perhaps you?

a confusing game to get to know each other

Game instructions

As soon as they arrive, the youth group members are asked for their name, which is written clearly on a large piece of paper. When all the children have arrived, they line up in a row with their noses close to the wall. The staff attach the name slips to the children's backs so that no child has their own name on their back. The task of the children is now to find out whose name is on their back by asking the others questions about the person they have guessed. The name of the person to be guessed may only be pronounced when the guessing person is absolutely sure! If they are wrong, they must look for another partner.
